FIVE KEY PRINCIPLES THAT TRAUMA-INFORMED WORKPLACES EMBODY

Promote awareness. In trauma-informed organizations, leaders and employees are aware of the pervasiveness of trauma and its significance in people's lives. Educating staff about trauma is integral to generating awareness.

Shift attitudes. By being intentional about shifting our attitudes and bringing curious empathy to all our interactions, workplaces can take the necessary steps to avoid re-traumatization and create environments that promote well-being for everyone.

Foster safety. When organizations include a focus on building relationships characterized by trust in our safety planning, strong, healthy, and resilient workplaces are encouraged.

Provide choice. Organizations can increase opportunities for choice among staff and clients by mindfully considering how power is distributed and managed in the workplace and sharing power where possible.

Highlight strengths. Every person has inherent strengths that help them survive. For people who have come through traumatic experiences, highlighting strengths is especially relevant because it helps emphasize and build up their resilience.
